SANTA CRUZ COUNTY

Home Sales Up

Sales of single-family, resale homes in Santa Cruz County were up 3.2% year-over-year. This comes on the heels of four straight months of double-digit declines.

Home sales have been lower than the year before for eleven of the past fourteen months.

The entry level market continues to lag due to low incomes and increased difficulty in getting a mortgage. This impacts the move-up market because those potential buyers can't sell their entry level homes.

Home inventory also continues to be a problem with the number of homes for sale about half the average for the past eight years.

MORTGAGE RATE OUTLOOK

Balancing Act For Mortgage Rates

October 3, 2014 -- HSH.com's broad-market mortgage tracker -- our weekly Fixed-Rate Mortgage Indicator (FRMI) -- found that the overall average rate for 30-year fixed-rate mortgages slipped backward by four basis points (.04%) drifting back to an average rate of 4.23 percent. The FRMI's 15-year companion shed three basis points to ease to an average rate of 3.49 percent. Fully-insured FHA-backed 30-year FRMs dipped the most, sporting a six basis point trim off last week's average, as these lowest-priced fixed rate mortgages eased down to 3.92 percent for the week. Finally, the overall 5/1 Hybrid ARM failed to move at all, holding a third consecutive week at an average 3.21 percent, still holding close to a 2014 high.

Spending for new construction projects eased in August, sliding by 0.8 percent as outlays for new homes declined by 0.1 percent, commercial building slipped 1.4 percent and public-works outlays fell by 0.9 percent. The pattern here has been a little erratic of late; In June, all three components declined, only to rebound in July and now to again decline in tandem in August.

After falling on deaf ears for much of the summer, news of an accelerating economy finally prompted a small lift in mortgage rates when business activity resumed a few weeks ago. Of late, the news has been solid, but hardly spectacular, and without a straight-up trajectory for the economy, rates have found a little space to slip. The reality is that nothing has really changed, excepting the injection of a little more volatility in interest rates. The economy is growing (has been, if somewhat more so), inflation remains muted (has been, if somewhat less so), the Fed's monetary policy is on auto-pilot (has been) and the world's troubles continue and low available investment yields continue to make the US the place to be.

Overall, that's good news, since we are likely to continue to see low and stable mortgage rates for a while, even if we do have flares of volatility. There's not much reason to expect anything more than rates wandering by a couple of basis points next week, probably upward if anything.

30-Year Fixed Mortgage Rates

The chart above shows the National monthly average for 30-year fixed rate mortgages as compiled by HSH.com. The average includes mortgages of all sizes, including conforming, "expanded conforming," and jumbo.
